Church History 1, Outline 8

From AD 600 to the beginnings of the Crusades at the end of the eleventh century was a time of consolidation of the power of the Roman church. It also saw the rise of a consolidated Europe, at least one as consolidated as was possible at the time. This was the time of Catholic supremacy in the West. But several important developments occurred at this time:

I. England

Augustine of Canterbury

Theodore

Venerable Bede

II. The Franks

A. Clovis

B. Charles Martel

C. Pepin (or, "Pippin") the Short

D. Charlemagne

III. The Iconoclastic Controversy and the Differences between East and West

A. Political Split between East and West

B. Theological Split between East and West

IV. The Rise of the Greatest of the Medieval Popes: Hildebrand and the Investiture Controversy
